"Dead Poets Society" is a wonderful movie with amazing actors like Robin Williams. The Carpe Diem "Seize the Day" speech delivered by Williams is well done as he inspires his students to take advantage of time to make the most of their lives. I agree with you that Williams supplements his argument with vocal variety, gestures, and draws ...

(Weir's two-time collaborator Harrison Ford jokes darkly that the film would be harder to sell only if it were called "Dead Poets Society in Winter".) Using a strategy that has Williams and others on the "Poets" team more than a little bit nervous, Touchstone chose to release this hard-to-summarize film in June.
