About Us - Fascinating Womanhood

Helen Berry Andelin (May 22, 1920 – June 7, 2009) was the founder of the Fascinating Womanhood Movement, beginning with the women's marriage classes she taught in the early 1960s. Controversial among feminists for its advice toward women's fulfilling traditional marriage roles, her writings are still supported and re-discovered as recently as 2016, with classes still being taught online and in seminars.

Helen Andelin - Wikipedia

Helen Andelin “The Fascinating Girl”. If you want to win the interest of men, you must first understand what men want in women. The ideas of feminine perfection are different from our own. The things we women admire in each other are rarely attractive to men. Women inclined to appreciate poise, talent, intellectual gifts and cleverness of personality, whereas men admire girlishness, tenderness, sweetness of character, vivacity and her ability to understand men.
